'Butchoy' forces end to standoff with China

By Tina G. Santos

IT LOOKS like stormy weather may break the standoff between the Philippines and China.

Citing bad weather, President Aquino has ordered home two Philippine ships engaged in a standoff with China over Scarborough Shoal, Foreign Secretary Albert del Rosario said yesterday.

Mr. Aquino ordered a Philippine Coast Guard patrol vessel and a Bureau of Fisheries and Aquatic Resources survey ship out of the disputed shoal in the West Philippine Sea (South China Sea) on Friday night, Del Rosario said.

"Last night, President Aquino ordered both of our ships to return to port due to increasing bad weather," Del Rosario said in a statement.

"When [the] weather improves, a reevaluation will be made," he added.

The announcement was made as Typhoon "Butchoy" approached the country's north from the Pacific Ocean.

With Butchoy gaining power and growing into a typhoon as it skimmed the eastern seaboard of the Philippines, intensified monsoon winds were causing squalls in the West Philippine Sea yesterday. (See story on Page A2.)

Arab TV reporter not 'missing,' says Sulu gov

By DJ Yap

MIDDLE Eastern TV journalist Baker Abdalla Atyani "deceived" Sulu Gov. Sakur Tan about his itinerary on the day he and his two Filipino crewmen went missing in Jolo, the governor told Interior Secretary Jesse M. Robredo.

Even "missing" may not be a right description for Atyani, Tan told the INQUIRER, because the journalist may just be pursuing a story somewhere on the island.

"While we exerted every effort to assist and secure [Atyani], he deceived us," Tan said in his report to Robredo about his meeting with the Jordanian chief of Al-Arabiya News Network's TV bureau in Southeast Asia.

Atyani, who was known for having interviewed Osama bin Laden months before the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks on New York and Washington,

Blessing to nurse a good dad: Jovy Salonga

By Niña Calleja

"THE SPIRIT of the old Jovito Salonga is gone."

This was how Steve Salonga, 62, one of the five children of the man who was a staunch fighter of corruption and a stout outspoken opponent of martial rule, described his ailing father.

The lawyer-statesman, now 92, is afflicted with dementia and Alzheimer's disease for the last two years. He's now being fed through a tube after he suffered a stroke and lost the ability to swallow.

"You know how to name a child? This is close to that," said Steve, a practicing lawyer, on how he and his family attend to their bedridden father.

He said the older Salonga could no longer speak, move, or understand the people

ARE you a responsible "househusband?"

With more and more Filipino women leaving for work abroad, the country is seeing the rise of Filipino househusbands—spouses left behind to take care of the household and the children, a Catholic Church official said yesterday.

Father Edwin Corros, executive secretary of the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines' Episcopal Commission on the Pastoral Care of Migrants and Itinerant People (CBCP-ECMI), said there was nothing to be ashamed about being a househusband al-

Soldier dads, soldier sons make Father's Day safe

By DJ Yap

PERHAPS nobody can appreciate Father's Day better than the children of soldiers who understand that every day that their fathers stay alive is a blessing.

Some 70,000 fathers make up more than half of the workforce of the Armed Forces of the Philippines, and each year, an average of 37 of the soldier dads get killed in action, making military service one of the deadliest jobs for Filipino fathers.

A soldier son whose father was killed by enemies of the state is the current chief of the Philippine Army, Lt. Gen. Emmanuel Bautista.

Bautista was a freshman cadet at the PMA when his father, Brig. Gen. Teodulfo Bautista, and 33 other officers and men were gunned down by Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) rebels in Patikul, Sulu, on Oct. 10, 1977.

BCDA chief accused of perjury by firm

By Jeannette I. Andrade

THE PRIVATE developer of Camp John Hay in Baguio City filed on Thursday a perjury charge at the Manila prosecutor's office accusing the head of the Bases Conversion and Development Authority (BCDA) of lying under oath to support an estafa charge against the developer, Camp John Hay Development Corp. (CJHDevco).

CJHDevco, represented by its vice president for litigation and lawyer, Manuel Ubarra Jr., filed the perjury complaint against BCDA president Arnel Paciano Casanova who allegedly lied to charge six officials of CJHDevco with estafa over the alleged "double sale" of one of five log homes in John Hay.

CJHDEVCO vice president Manuel T. Ubarra Jr. and CJHDevco's legal counsel Frank Chavez file the perjury case at the Manila prosecutor's office on June 14. [illegible]

He was accompanied in filing the case by former Senator Francisco "Frank" Chavez.

Casanova on March 9 filed at the justice department an estafa complaint against CJHDevco officials Robert John Sobrepeña, Ferdinand Santos, Fred Gocos, Alfredo Yñiguez, [illegible] and Rizaly Santos-Paler.

The CJHDevco officials were accused of deceiving the BCDA in entering into a deal on May 27, 2010, in order to limit P98 million in CJHDevco debts using five log homes as payment.

Casanova claimed that the BCDA learned too late that one of the log homes had been sold in 1999 to a certain Wilson Sy who gave a P20-million downpayment.

In the perjury complaint, lawyer Ubarra said Casanova lied about the log home and called Casanova's charge a "malicious accusation."

The supposed buyer, Sy, rescinded his offer to purchase the log home on April 24, 2001, in a letter sent by Sy's legal counsel to CJHDevco, said the perjury complaint.

[illegible] by Ubarra said, recounted the decision not to proceed with buying the log home in two more letters, one in January 2001 and the other on April 24, 2001.

An affidavit executed by Sy on May 18 this year debunked Casanova's allegation that the log home had been sold twice. In that letter, Sy sought a refund of his P20-million downpayment from CJHDevco.

"Clearly, there was no double sale at all," said Ubarra in the perjury complaint.

Casanova, said Ubarra, lied to the justice department in his complaint on May 9 this year "falsely claiming that there was" a double sale.

Ubarra said the false claim made by Casanova [illegible] the case for estafa filed against CJHDevco.

"If there was no double sale, there was no fraud. Hence, no estafa," said Ubarra.

Casanova, said the CJHDevco lawyer, "completely and conveniently failed" to mention that the 1999 sale of the unit to Wilson Sy was rescinded as far back as 2001 by Wilson Sy himself."

Casanova's complaint was used as basis by the Department of Justice to issue subpoenas to determine probable cause against CJHDevco, said Ubarra.

FLORAL designer Robert Blancaflor's table setting combines and contrasts black and white elements.

A 'Black Swan' bash

The living and high-society magazine has emerged as the leading glossy in its category for 5 years now

By Alex Y. Vergara

IN KEEPING with its 25th-anniversary theme inspired by "The Black Swan," Lifestyle Asia and its designer collaborators led by London-based Filipino Lanvin Gran dressed up Shangri-La Makati's huge Rizal Ballroom with dramatic floor-to-ceiling black drapes, dazzling "feather" lighting fixtures resembling swans' wings, and a new installation with enveloped seeds as fruits.

"The black swan is a metaphor for a philosophical concept describing a rare event with far-reaching effects long after it has transpired," said Lifestyle Asia editor in chief Anna Sobrepeña during opening remarks. "Twenty-five year anniversaries happen only once in a lifetime. That's what makes it rare."

The tree installation also underscores Lifestyle Asia's commitment to the environment. In the last few years, as a way of giving back to the earth, it began planting trees for every page the magazine used to print its monthly edition, said Sobrepeña.

"The seeds are not only symbols of descent and good tidings," she added. "They will become gardens and forests in our commitment to partner with those who believe that great things come from small beginnings."

Gran had the seeds wrapped in envelopes made of handmade paper. Each envelope was suspended from the ceiling to form one forest over a trunk.

To emphasize the "duality" between black and white in his table settings, leading floral designer and event stylist Robert Blancaflor played with white and myriad of accents in the form of roses, candles, [illegible] and glass beads on black table cloth.

Black-tie event

Lifestyle Asia had reasons to celebrate. As a member of the One Mega Group Inc. family, the high-society magazine has emerged as the leading glossy in its category for five years now in annual surveys conducted by global market research firm Synovate Media Atlas (formerly Synovate's).

The black-tie, [illegible] dinner also had surprise guest performers: Goldlink chair George Yang, former Rep. Miguel Zubiri, and athlete, youth leader and media heartthrob Chris Tiu.

Yang, a trained classical singer, belted out such staples as "O Sole Mio" and "Volare," while Zubiri, with Tiu on the piano, sang "I Love the Way You Love Me" and "Back for Good." Classical singer Stephanie Reese and first-time pop performer Bea Santos also performed.

Asian-inspired menu

Shangri-La Makati's chefs came up with an Asian-inspired menu. Champagne and paired wines provided by Moet Hennessy flowed all night.

Sobrepeña, in semi-beaded black dress with [illegible] silhouette by Cary Santiago, also handed out awards—glass plaques designed by Ingo Filippi—to Lifestyle Asia's 25 top advertisers. With her onstage were One Mega Group colleagues Sam Yap, founder and CEO, and J. Tiu, chair.

Donations from such influential Philippine companies as CVC Law Center (Like The Firm) and SGV & Co. accounting firm went to chosen advocacies such as Gifts and Graces, The Joy of Urban Farming and [illegible]. Inquirer President and CEO Sandy Prieto-Romualdez received the donation for Gifts and Graces.

As fitting start to Lifestyle Asia's next 25 years, Sobrepeña also called the guests' attention to the magazine's redesigned logo.

"Earlier, we saw an excerpt by dancers of Ballet Philippines," she said. "The perfect essence of the dying swan is a [illegible] predicting new things to come. Our redesigned logo is the signpost signifying changes to address the evolving needs of our readership."

PBB's Jason Francisco spends a day with 'lolos' and 'lolas'

JASON Francisco of "Pinoy Big Brother Double Up Edition" recently visited Mary Mother of Mercy Home for the Elderly and the Abandoned in Barangay San Antonio, Laguna.

He brought a P100,000 check donation. He chose Mary Mother of Mercy Home for the Elderly and the Abandoned as his charitable organization for Bench's 1M for 100 campaign on Twitter.

For every 100,000 Twitter followers of @benchtm, Bench gives P100,000 each to the charity with the biggest number of votes. A total of P1 million will be donated to charity, divided into 10, to help more institutions.

The 56 lolos and lolas at Mary Mother of Mercy are under the care of the nuns of St. Francis Xavier, led by Sr. Venus Marie.

Francisco is happy and grateful he won for his charity since he has a soft spot for the elderly especially his grandparents.

"We just sighed and said, thanks be to God, when we found out that Jason won; we were so happy and overwhelmed by his deserving posts among the Bench Ambassadors," said Sr. Venus Marie. "It is indeed a very good help for our lolas, for their medical needs and for their basic necessities and whatever they may need for their convenience while spending their remaining years in our home."

Among the celebrities who joined the cause, or tweet, and promote their chosen institutions were Paolo Avelino (Philippine Red Cross), Jessy Mendiola (Missionaries of Charity), Ding Dong Dantes (YesPinoy Foundation), Lovi Poe (ChildHope Asia), [illegible] Ocampo (KIDS Foundation), [illegible] (AGAPP), [illegible] (CRIBS), Lucy Torres Gomez (KIDS [illegible]), [illegible], Sam Concepcion (World Vision), Rocco Nacino (Cancer Warriors Foundation), [illegible] (National Children's Hospital), [illegible] (School for the Deaf), [illegible] (CHILDHaus), Isabelle Daza (Tahanan, Home of the Abused Girls), [illegible] (Philippine Orthopedic Center Auxiliary Board Inc.), [illegible] Lawrence (World Vision), [illegible] (White Cross), Anthony and David Semerad (World Vision).

Flash mob at Rockwell Power Plant

PEOPLE ACROSS ages and economic classes are getting the hang of it—the flash mob phenomenon. It's been happening in malls.

A few weeks ago, afternoon shoppers and diners at the Power Plant Food Court at Rockwell witnessed an instant entertainment when hundreds of Rockwell employees turned into a flash mob. Their dancing took people's minds off the summer heat. The Rockwell flash mob celebrated Rockwell's listing in the Philippine Stock Exchange and to honor Rockwell head Manolo Lopez.

DAD'S MY GUY

Portrait of a man

By Michelle Velez

UNDER the sweltering heat of the sun, the tall, dark and muscular man rubs off his sweat and looks fiercely at the armed men who are ready to strike at the slightest nudge. With four men surrounding him in all four corners, he contemplates on what to do next. Strike and risk being cornered and killed, or wait patiently until one of them attacks?

Alas, a mammoth of a man attempts to charge him, but he's already a few steps ahead. He ducks, strikes and hits the enemy hard in the face, and a few more in the gut. After perpetual exchange of blows, four men are found helplessly lying on the floor, grimacing in pain. The tall, dark and muscular man strikes a pose. He has conquered his enemies despite the odds.

He has become the hero. He has become "the man."

Victory achieved through power is a celebration of manhood, of being able to successfully display brute strength, valor and roughness in the most challenging situations to emerge as a champion. It is an overt display of power and of the willingness to risk pain and suffering, to prove that one is man enough to fight his battles and win them all.

Somehow, it's how we tend to look at our fathers, the most macho man we'll ever know.

In Sculpting the Macho Man: Hypermasculine Socialization and Involvement in the Journal of Sex Research in 1988, Tomkins and Mosher believe that the ideology of machismo is generally a warrior's. He holds dominion over all he has conquered. He is master and patriarch.

So more than being a man's man, ideal men are also fathers.

The command of the father role in men brings about an authority that testifies to men's tendency to provide and protect the family. It has also exhibited an all-knowing power and influence in all aspects of household practices and child rearing.

The father as an authority figure could be due to the inherent "power" associated with men. In the Politics of Manhood, authors Michael Kimmel and Michael Kaufmann described this as an entitlement.

> 'The command of the father role in men brings about an authority that testifies to men's tendency to provide and protect the family'

So they assume the role as providers of a family. In David Savran's 1998 portrait of a man in Taking It Like A Man (1998), Savran described the American male as "responsible for the support of his wife and children. His primary area of performance is the occupational role, in which his status has dominantly inherent, and his primary function in the family is to supply an income, to be the breadwinner. There is simply something wrong with the American adult male who doesn't have a job."

The Filipino men seem to agree. As of the 2012 Updates on Men and Women in the Philippines by the National Statistical Coordination Board (NSCB), men make up 60.7 percent of the labor force in the Philippines. In a 2010 survey by the National Statistics Office and the survey on Filipino workers, men also represent the most number of Overseas Filipino Workers (1,200,000), with more than P50 billion in total remittances. But being a "family man" does not get to the top of Pinoys' level of happiness. In a 2010 NSCB survey, Filipino men were happier than women, 89.2 percent compared to women's 82.8. Top three reasons include health, religious and/or spiritual work, and family.

Real men

The traditional expectations and assumptions of male behavior and personality, as depicted in mass media, are made to appear as if part of the natural order of things. Men are expected to be have a certain way, totally ensuring a sheer disregard for the "other," which comprises traits that fall under or relate to passivity, dependence, the usual warm, fuzzy feelings, and mercy.

Kaufmann and Blazed said that masculinity might be a flight from femininity and its emotional elements, like compassion, nurturance, and affection but it does not mean that these capacities are completely absent in men. They are just "more or less muted."

But today, they are in full volume with the fast proliferation and acceptance of vanity products for men.

For instance, this Father's Day, leading cosmetics shop The Body Shop offers a plethora of vanity gifts for the "self-conscious" fathers. There's a White Musk Sport scent that contains grapefruit and lemon for subtle, memorable, masculine scent; the Men Maca Root Face Protector made from Peruvian sourced maca root that serves as a balancing moisturizer to rehydrate the skin; the Arber Hair and Body Wash for the lightly scented, sensual woody fragrance; the Tea Tree Cleansing wipes, facial mask and lotion; the Wheatgrass Fixing Gel and The Body Shop Chocomania for "an indulgent bathing regime" with chocolate. These products do not really address insecurities. They just make good sense for men to take care of themselves the way women have done for many centuries.

On top of the hype on makeover, there is a silent but strong desire to break free from long-established myths. For no-one has the right to tell another person what his true desires are.

But there is a knowledge that never gets old. Men, expected to be like their fathers, work hard to provide a better life for their families, discipline their children and advise their sons on responsibilities ahead of life as "men in their family."

When it comes to French Brandy, VSOP is truly a mark of being special. After all, it does stand for Very Special (or Superior) Old and Pale.

In the Philippines we have Napoleon VSOP Brandy specially made for Very Special Outstanding People. This product has already won 2/3 stars from the International Taste and Quality Institute, Brussels.

Make dad feel like a Very Special Outstanding Person with a bottle of Napoleon VSOP Brandy, the best Brandy that the Philippines can offer this Father's Day!

Tough balancing act for OFWs

By Joel V. Nigos

BEING a father is a big responsibility. He is expected to provide as well as guide his children as they grow up. But with the social changes brought about by fathers making a hard choice to work overseas, some of the father roles have been changing also.

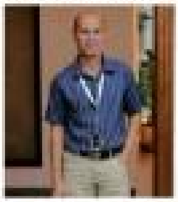

Here are the stories of three fathers on the balancing act of providing for family and still doing the father roles while being thousands of miles away from their families.

Mercedes-Benz AMG Petronas F1 team and IWC Schaffhausen announce a new partnership

HEAR THE LION CITY ROAR

Since the first Formula One night race was staged in Singapore in 2008, the yearly spectacle has set new standards in motorsports. Now in its fifth year, the 2012 FORMULA 1 SINGTEL SINGAPORE GRAND PRIX will continue to captivate audiences with its powerful combination of thrilling race action, world-class entertainment and a spectacular backdrop of heritage buildings and iconic modern architecture.

Located right in the heart of the city, the Marina Bay Street Circuit is conveniently accessible, with six subway stations at its doorstep. Spectators are just a stone's throw away from hotels, numerous sightspots, award-winning restaurants and shopping malls.

"It's spectacular seeing the cars so close at night, seeing them right in front of you in the middle of the city," says Sebastian Vettel, 2011 Formula One World Champion. "There are a lot of concerts going on, things like that make it all in all very spectacular for people to come. The attraction is huge."

Part of the attraction this year are the headliners: pop sensation Katy Perry, Grammy-award winner Maroon 5, chart-topping artist Noel Gallagher's High Flying Birds and Taiwanese R&B king Jay Chou who will perform at the Padang stage. Ticketholders are also able to relive the greatest hits of the '80s as Bananarama, Pretenders and The Proclaimers perform at various entertainment stages over the three days. There are also plenty of food and beverage options available within the circuit park, such as the 'Hawker Village' in Zone 4 which features international cuisine as well as local delights.

> "The settling night atmosphere of the race makes it one of the jewels of the calendar."
> Martin Whitmarsh, McLaren F1 Team Principal

Hublot ties up with Ferrari

HUBLOT Big Bang Ferrari watch in titanium

LUXURY Swiss watch brand Hublot recently entered into a comprehensive agreement with the Italian sports car manufacturer Ferrari, merging the brand images and the commercial activities of both companies. The two companies say this collaboration will be more than the creation of watch collections, operating a license, or a sponsorship agreement. It was described in a joint statement as a "genuine exchange between the two brands, a pooling of resources and information." Under the arrangement, Hublot becomes the exclusive watchmaking partner in the full range of Ferrari's activities. This includes Hublot as having the title of the following: "Official Watch" of Ferrari, "Official Timekeeper" of Ferrari, "Official Timekeeper" of Scuderia Ferrari, "Official Watch" of Scuderia Ferrari, "Official Timekeeper" of the Ferrari Challenge, and partner in Ferrari special events.

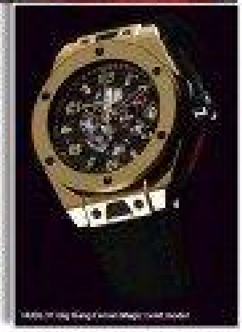

The partnership was announced last November during the Finali Mondiali Ferrari race at the Mugello International Circuit, where the world finals event that traditionally marks the end of the Prancing Stallion's sports season. The new partnership will then head to the emerging markets of China and the Middle East. Ferrari is a leading luxury brands in China and Hublot is establishing itself in the country with 3 boutiques currently and 17 openings planned by the end of 2012.

"Exclusivity, technology, passion, style. Hublot and Ferrari share many core values and this new partnership between two such highly prestigious brands is an important milestone for both," said Luca Cordero di Montezemolo, president of Ferrari S.p.A. "This collaboration, rich in a host of synergies, gives Hublot a massive boost along the road," added Jean-Claude Biver, CEO of Hublot.

The Big Bang Ferrari watches – in gold and titanium

The Big Bang Ferrari features a large 45.5 mm diameter case, with a cylindrical bezel and a sapphire dial. Fixed along the rotating axis of the watch's inclined crown are elongated push buttons designed to look like the foot pedals of a car and carbon inserts in the case. The automotive links extend to the two interchangeable straps that feature a quick-change system inspired by a safety seatbelt mechanism, and tone on tone stitching reflecting Ferrari's signature upholstery.

The watch's hands and indices were inspired from a Ferrari dashboard, with the minute counter positioned at 3 o'clock complemented by a date window in "Modena" yellow. The dial features the logo of the famous prancing horse, which is featured in relief at 9 o'clock. The Big Bang Ferrari is powered by Hublot's Unico movement and is made up of some 330 components, oscillating at a frequency of 28,800 vibrations per hour. The column wheel and dual function coupling on the dial are designed to be reminiscent of Ferrari alloy wheel rims. Unlike the Ferrari cars, the watch is water resistant to 100 m (330 ft) and has a 72-hour power reserve. The Big Bang Ferrari also features Hublot's new Magic Gold material, which was developed in house by Hublot. Formed by fusing gold with ceramic materials, Hublot says the patented 18-carat alloy is the world's first scratch-resistant gold and has a hardness rating of almost 1,000 Vickers, which is more than double the hardness of standard high quality 18 carat gold (400 Vickers) and most hardened steels (up to 600 Vickers). There is also a titanium case version of the same model.

Hublot is a Swiss watch house creating ultra-luxury watches and was founded in 1980 by Carlo Crocco but the company was sold and currently forms part of the luxury portfolio owned and operated by French luxury conglomerate LVMH.
